COURSE

ESL Communication + English for Specific Purposes

This is an English language communication course, grounded in an engaging and dynamic communicative methodology. It targets the development of English language skills in reading, writing, listening and speaking. The focus is multidisciplinary, and students will have the opportunity to explore discipline-specific contexts and materials to further develop communicative competence related to their specific area of study or work. Through participation in lectures, workshops and site visits, students will apply language skills in real-life situations in the areas of engineering, business or education.
