Executive Summary

HOPES (Halifax Outreach Prevention Education Support) is a student led initiative with the objective of establishing an interprofessional community health clinic for marginalized populations at St. Andrew’s church Sunday Suppers. It is the Steering Committee’s intention that the Health Centre will complement existing community services by providing health promotion and navigation programs and preventative and basic primary care.

The Steering Committee comprises the student body responsible for establishing the clinic and currently consists of nine academic programs from Dalhousie University and Mount Saint Vincent University, and the Medavie Health Education program including Dentistry, Health Administration, Medicine, Nursing, Dietetics, Occupational Therapy, Social Work, Paramedicine, and Pharmacy. Please see page 3 for more information on the organization and current activities.

Halifax is one of the only major cities in Canada without a Student Run Clinic. The Health Centre presents a rare opportunity for the community and students. The HOPES initiative will allow students the opportunity to learn to work together as an interprofessional teams in a clinical setting while learning more about and working with a diverse population that often faces challenges in accessing the healthcare and social services.

The plan is for HOPES to begin offering services in January, 2016. Health promotion, education, and navigation services will be provided at St. Andrew’s Church in conjunction with Sunday Suppers on Sundays from 1:30-5:30 by junior students. Primary Care Services will be offered at Dalhousie Health Services Clinic on LeMarchant St. on Sundays from 1:30-4:00 in the afternoon by more senior students. For the initial two months, the clinic will operate on a trial basis with a small group of already involved students. The clinic will expand to be fully operational for February with the plan of offering full services and operating weekly from that point forward.

Interprofessional Education in HOPES

Interprofessional Collaboration is a core value for the HOPES student led health initiative. Through the developed model of care, there are several opportunities for interprofessional collaboration and learning. At St. Andrew’s, students will be working in teams made up of individuals from different programs on offering services weekly, as well as working in interprofessional teams to plan health promotion activities. At the Clinic, students will see patients in interprofessional teams made up based on the patient/clients needs. The teams will work with their preceptors to develop a care plan for the patient. After the Health Centre has closed each week, students will be required to participate in a collaborative debrief, which will include both a debrief on clinic operations as well as on working together and reflecting on the competencies and interprofessional learning that took place.

The Potential for HOPES

To begin, HOPES will be offering services on Sunday Afternoons at St. Andrew’s United Church Sunday Suppers and Dalhousie Health Services clinic. In the future, the clinic will ideally offer services an additional one evening a week and will expand its reach in the community. Additionally, the Health Centre hopes to expand to include students from all health-related programs who are interested.
