

Congratulations — you're now a resident!

As you begin residency, you will likely find yourself facing new and exciting aspects of medicine, such as clinical rotations and increased responsibility, as well as the challenge of creating a good work-life balance. You may also see changes in your financial situation, including facing the debt you accrued in medical school and managing your new salary.

MD Financial Management (MD) is here to help with physician-focused advice. At MD, we take the time to understand your personal circumstances. An MD Advisor* can help you understand various topics related to your finances. An Advisor would be happy to meet with you to discuss your personal situation, as well as to tell you about MD webinars, events, and other resources to help you succeed along your financial journey.

MD is the only financial management company dedicated to Canada's physicians, focused on helping you and your family meet your financial goals throughout your career. With more than 50 offices across Canada, we're here for you — wherever you're located.
