Abstract:

In the ‘post-truth’ environment in which we currently find ourselves, it is more important than ever that we Earth Scientists share our unique perspective on time, and refresh ourselves on the history and basic principles of geochronology. In this talk, I’ll review some of the fascinating people and events that led up to our current ability to date the Earth and its rocks, as well as some geochronology basics that you can use at the dinner table should the moment arise.
