

RESOURCE AND ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

Master of Environmental Studies (MES) Master of Resource and Environmental Management (MREM)

Our School is one of the original and leading institutions in environmental management and capacity building in Canada and abroad. At our core is an interdisciplinary teaching and applied research program emphasizing rigorous inquiry and ethical practice as the foundation of responsible environmental and resource management. Efforts are devoted to addressing causes rather than symptoms and learning to anticipate and adapt to change. We offer two graduate programs that suit different learning styles:

Why study Resource and Environmental Studies at Dalhousie?

RESEARCH STRENGTHS

Our faculty members have interests and expertise in: biodiversity conservation; ecosystem services; energy systems; food sustainability; freshwater and marine systems; Indigenous perspectives; industrial sustainability; policy and public engagement; sustainable forest management; and, urban and rural issues. Students intending to apply to the MES should make contact with potential supervisors early.

POTENTIAL CAREERS

A similarly wide range of employers have sought graduates from each of our programs, including: municipal, federal or provincial government; NGOs such as Nature Conservancy, World Wildlife Fund, and the United Nations Environment Programme; and, environmental consulting. Our thesis-based program is more suited, however, to doctoral studies, and careers in academic teaching and/or research. Our Alumni Mentoring Program will help widen the possibilities for a meaningful career after graduation.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

Candidates must satisfy the general requirements for admission to the Faculty of Graduate Studies and provide proof of funding and language test as necessary (international students). A TOEFL of 100 or IELTS of 7.5 is required.

APPLICATION DEADLINE

January 15 for scholarship consideration (MES); January 31 for all other applications.
