

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First and foremost, I wish to express my deepest gratitude to my supervisor and committee members, Dr. Michelle Adams, Dr. Tony Walker, and Professor Gregory Magnan, for providing invaluable guidance and great support throughout this whole process. I am also very appreciative of them for entrusting me with creative freedom to explore across disciplinary boundaries and making it possible for me to pursue my research remotely from Vancouver, British Columbia, far from my home institute. I am deeply thankful to them for the hours of long-distance conference calls and timely and positive communications that focused and continually raised the bar on my efforts.

I am also enormously grateful to Dr. Lynne Robinson, the Interdisciplinary Ph.D. Program Director, for her incredible support and the warm encouragement from the very outset to the completion of this work.

My heartfelt appreciation goes to my mentor and friend, Colin Laughlan, Columnist at Maritime Magazine, for his insightful industry experiences, knowledge, and ideas as well as priceless editorial advice, and for being a constant source of encouragement and support in the last stages of this long journey. I am very delighted and thankful to have met him along my way!

I am eternally grateful to Dr. Alex Phillips, President & CEO, and Lara Snead, Vice President Operations, at the Van Horne Institute for International Transportation and Regulatory Affairs for their kind and generous support at various key points over the course of the last phase of this dissertation. I am also deeply indebted to Mr. Peter Xotta, Vice President Planning and Operations, and his team at the Vancouver Fraser Port Authority for their extensive support in facilitating the last phase of this dissertation.

I would like to extend my sincere gratitude to my mentor, Ms. Marian Robson, Chair at the Pacific Chapter of the Chartered Institute of Logistics and Transport in North America (CILTNA), for volunteering her professional time and her caring and dedicated guidance during the time leading up to, during, and after the last phase of this dissertation. Thank you also goes out to Dr. Oksana Exell, President & CEO, at the Western Transportation Advisory Council (WESTAC) for providing me with the opportunity to build networks to help my research, by inviting and supporting my attendance and participation at their 2019 Spring Forum.

I owe a great deal of gratitude to the many individuals, agencies, and groups who have provided valuable insights and participated in the survey study, the informational meetings, and the in-depth interviews. The research would not have been possible without their participation and contribution.

I am also grateful for the opportunity I had to be hosted as a Visiting Graduate Student at the Centre for Transportation Studies, Sauder School of Business, at the University of British Columbia. I would like to express my thanks and appreciation to Professor David Gillen, Director, and Dr. Jane Lister, Associate Director, at the Centre for Transportation Studies, in particular, who have had an inspiring influence on both my research and my engagement with the Green Shipping Partnership (an international maritime research network aiming to advance knowledge and understanding towards the progressive governance of sustainable maritime transport).

It is also an honour to acknowledge the following awards and grants which enabled me to successfully complete this dissertation: the Nova Scotia Graduate Scholarship; the Faculty of Graduate Studies Scholarship; the Faculty of Management Graduate Research Scholarship; the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada [Grant #STPGP 494648-16]; and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada [Grant #895-2017-1003].

And finally, I am most thankful to my family and friends for their unconditional love and support, and for instilling in me the courage and perseverance to achieve my ambitious goals. While I cannot hope to comprehensively acknowledge all who have supported me through my Ph.D., I would like to express my appreciation, from the bottom of my heart, to all for their support through this incredible journey.
