Class Details:

Class: Mondays - Wednesdays 11:35am-12:55pm,¹ room 309
Course website: Brightspace Learning System (BLS)

Course Description and Objectives:

The purpose of this course is to introduce to students the analysis of law from the perspective of economics. Economics offers an important theoretical perspective in the understanding of law and legal institutions. The economic analysis of law involves both positive and normative aspects. The positive analysis of law looks at the impact of law on society whereas the normative analysis asks what laws are most desirable for society. To that end, an efficiency criterion is used. The fundamental objective is to understand and evaluate legal rules by asking how rational individuals can be expected to respond to them.

Course Pre-requisites:

Successful completion of an introduction to microeconomics undergraduate course (A- or higher).

Environment in and out of the classroom

[1] The class will meet twice a week for a one and a half hour seminar session. Coming to class prepared is therefore paramount. A (small) participation component to your final mark will measure your active engagement with the material, not just class attendance. Economics is all about incentives!

[2] Office hours are indicated above but feel free to catch me at other times if my door is open. Please feel free to drop in. However, it may be useful to tell me in advance by email if you plan to come, if so when, and what you will be discussing.

¹ I will be away on Monday September 10th and Wednesday September 19th and, if possible, we will strive to make up for that time over the course of the semester, details TBA.
[3] To avoid duplication, it is best to use the discussion board on Brightspace to ask questions that are relevant to the course and might benefit other students. If your question is personal and urgent, you are welcome to send an e-mail and I will try to reply within 48 hours. In general, I would encourage you to ask longer questions during office hours since it is generally more efficient to do it this way. Email and discussion board exchanges cannot be a substitute for substantive questions and answers during office hours. Please use office hours during the semester as opposed to at the very end when they tend to be crammed. Before coming to office hours, make sure you have thoroughly read the material.

[4] Under no circumstances should you be copying or transposing the assignment of a classmate. If you have questions about what is and is not allowed, please read below or come and speak to me.

[5] I expect students to attend all lecture sessions, and participate actively in class discussions. Please turn all electronic devices off before stepping into class.

Assessment and Grading

Two short assignments + longer end of term essay + participation. The essay will be a topic of your choice that relates to at least two of the themes covered during the semester. It must be original. It can be e.g., a theoretical piece or a case comment. Empirical work welcome but fraught with challenges. One thing it should not be is a literature review. Any standard formatting style and citation method is acceptable as long as it is followed consistently.

Posting of the assignments will be done over the semester. You will get approximately two weeks to complete each assignment. Late submission of assignments will be subject to law school late penalties, unless prior written permission for an extension is granted in advance by the Studies Committee. All assignments and essays will be sent electronically through Brightspace.

Textbook/Required Course Materials:

http://scholarship.law.berkeley.edu/books/2/
+ Other materials, if any, will be made available online

NOTE: many cases that we will discuss in class are referenced in the textbook web notes. You do not need to read the entire case to understand the issues. You are welcome (but not required) to read the cases if you think it can bring more to class discussion.

Other Law and Economics books of interest (optional):

Finding Journals:
The reading list includes some journal articles. Most of the journals are available to Dal students through the Dal library on JSTOR, http://www.jstor.org . I have included hyperlinks.
Lecture Schedule:

Week 1:

Wednesday September 5th  lecture 1  Introduction to law and economics

Chapter 1: Introduction to Law and Economics

Cooter Ulen Chapter 1

Note: we will not review in detail Chapter 2 (microeconomic tools). You are encouraged to go through it at your own pace over the semester, and refer to specific concepts whenever they are used in the analysis of legal topics. The background material in Chapter 3 is intended for non law students but is useful to browse insofar as it introduces you to the U.S. legal system, from which the field of law and economics emanates for the most part.

1. Student Requests for Accommodation

Requests for special accommodation for reasons such as illness, injury or family emergency will require an application to the Law School Studies Committee. Such requests (for example, for assignment extensions) must be made to Associate Dean, Academic Michael Deturbide or the Director of Student Services and Engagement Dana-Lyn Mackenzie as soon as possible, before a scheduled exam or a deadline for an assignment, and will generally require documentation. Retroactive accommodation will not be provided. Please note that individual professors cannot entertain accommodation requests.

Students may request accommodation for either classroom participation or the writing of tests and exams due to barriers related to disability, religious obligation, or any characteristic under the Nova Scotia Human Rights Act. Students who require such accommodation must make their request to the Advising and Access Services Center (AASC) at the outset of the regular academic year. Please visit www.dal.ca/access for more information and to obtain the Request for Accommodation – Form A. Students may also contact the Advising and Access Services Centre directly at (902) 494-2836.

2. Submission of Major Papers and Assignments

Major papers and assignments must be submitted in hard copy. Students should hand papers in to the place stipulated by the instructor and ensure they are date and time stamped. Please read the law school policy on late penalties: https://www.dal.ca/faculty/law/current-students/jd-students/academic-regulations.html

Please note students may also be required to provide an identical electronic copy of their paper to the instructor by the due date. Papers may be submitted by the instructor to a text-matching software service to check for originality. Students wishing to choose an alternative method of checking the authenticity of their work must indicate to the instructor, by no later than the add/drop date of the course, which one of the following alternative methods they choose:

a) submit copies of multiple drafts demonstrating development of their work
b) submit copies of sources
c) submit an annotated bibliography

3. Plagiarism

All students must read the University policies on plagiarism and academic honesty http://academicintegrity.dal.ca/ and the Law School policy on plagiarism
Any paper or assignment submitted by a student at the Schulich School of Law may be checked for originality to confirm that the student has not plagiarized from other sources. Plagiarism is considered a serious academic offence which may lead to loss of credit, suspension or expulsion from the law school, or even revocation of a degree. It is essential that there be correct attribution of authorities from which facts and opinions have been derived. Prior to submitting any paper or other assignment, students should read and familiarize themselves with the policies referred to above and should consult with the instructor if they have any questions. Ignorance of the policies on plagiarism will not excuse any violation of those policies.

Clarification on Plagiarism versus Collaboration:

“There are many other opportunities for plagiarism, for instance, copying on exams and assignments. There is a clear line between group work on assignments and copying solutions from others. It is alright to work on assignments with your friends. In fact, working in groups may be beneficial. For best results, you should always attempt to solve the problem alone, prior to meeting with the group. Whenever you collaborate with your colleagues on assignments, you must always prepare your own submission. Copying is plagiarism! This includes copying the work of others, making changes, and submitting it as your own work.

Specific examples of plagiarism include, but are not limited to, the following:
- Copying a computer file from another student, and using it as a template for your own solution
- Copying text written by another student
- Submitting the work of a tutor as your own
- Including your name on a group submission when you have not contributed to that submission

Specific examples of acceptable collaboration include, but are not limited to, the following:
- Discussing the issues and underlying factors of a case with fellow students, and then each of the students writing up their submissions individually, in their own words.
- Working on a computer-based exercise collaboratively, and then each of the students creating their own submissions individually, from start to finish.
