Dalhousie Legal Aid Service is committed to building a socially just society: one that upholds and validates the values of equality, diversity, inclusiveness, democracy and concern for human welfare. Our work with the community and students seeks to incorporate these values in all aspects of our operation including but not limited to student selection, project selection, community development and law reform.

Dalhousie Legal Aid Service gives consideration to applicants who are Acadian, Aboriginal, African Canadian, members of other racially-visible groups, persons with disabilities and Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Two Spirited, Queer and Intersex (LGBTQT) people.

Dalhousie Legal Aid Service is committed to admitting and advancing the highest possible number of students who qualify under this policy. Please let us know if you would like the opportunity to be considered under this policy by self-identifying.

Selection Process for Clinical Law:

- The selection committee shall be composed of the Executive Director, a student, the Office Manager and a DLAS professional staff member on a rotational basis.
- The committee will use a consensus model for decision making.
- The committee will accept application forms and letters outlining the applicant’s interest in the clinic and what attributes they would bring.
- Information in the letters submitted about “social justice” will be considered in prioritizing applicants for selection.
- The committee will consider other courses taken or selected by the applicant that would enhance their clinic experience (Administrative law, Criminal Procedure, Poverty Law)
