

Purdy Crawford Fellowship in Business Law 2026-2027 Call for Expressions of Interest

The Purdy Crawford Fellowship honours the legacy of Purdy Crawford and his contributions to business law and policy. Fellows are expected to participate actively in the intellectual life of the Schulich School of Law at Dalhousie University in a way that supports their development as scholars and teachers. Purdy Crawford Fellows will teach two courses – one in the core business law curriculum, and one on a special business law topic, determined in consultation with the Dean and the Associate Dean (Academic). They will also participate actively in the scholarly activities of the faculty, including by presenting in the faculty seminar series. It is anticipated that Fellows will be working toward publishing parts of their graduate work and conducting new research. It is not anticipated that Fellows will carry administrative responsibilities.

The Schulich School of Law offers a rich intellectual home for business law and policy scholars. We understand that businesses operate in larger social, economic and political contexts. We care about the interactions of business law and policy with technology, governance and stakeholder rights, and economic, social and environmental justice.

Applications will be adjudicated on a combination of academic record (including research productivity) and the fit between the applicant's research and teaching interests and the business law curriculum and the School's needs and strategic priorities. Applicants are generally expected to be post-doctoral or doctoral students in at least the third year of their doctoral studies.

Dalhousie University and the Schulich School of Law are committed to fostering a collegial culture grounded in diversity and inclusiveness. We encourage applications from candidates who would contribute to the diversity of our community.

Fellows are expected to be in residence at the School from the beginning of August 2026 through the end of June 2027. This is an 11-month, part-time academic appointment. Purdy Crawford Fellows receive a total stipend of $55,000.
