

Race, Place and the Law

Perspectives on Environmental Racism,
Grassroots Resistance, and Law and Policy in Nova Scotia

Tuesday, March 7th, 2017 from 6:00 – 7:30 PM

Room 105, Weldon Law Building

Pre-Reception from 5:30 – 6:00 — Light Refreshments Served

In Nova Scotia, Mi'kmaq and African Nova Scotian communities are threatened disproportionately by polluting industries and other environmental harms. How do communities organize to resist environmental racism, and how can law and policy help to secure communities' access to justice?

Please join the Marine & Environmental Law Institute and the Environmental Law Students' Society at the Schulich School of Law for a panel discussion featuring:

Jim Maloney	(District Chief for Sipekne'katik)
Stuart C.B. Gilby	(LL.B., LL.M. – Burchells LLP)
Lisa Mitchell	(LL.B. – Executive Director, East Coast Environmental Law Association)
Ingrid Waldron	(Associate Professor, School of Nursing, Dalhousie University)

Want to learn more about the Marine & Environmental Law Program?
Students are invited to join the MELP faculty for a 'Meet the Profs' reception following the panel, at 7:30 PM in the student lounge.

If you plan to attend the reception, please RSVP through the Events page in MySchulichLaw.

For more information, please email elss@dal.ca or find us on Facebook.

