At Dalhousie University, we acknowledge that we are in Mi'kma'ki, the ancestral and unceded territory of the Mi'kmaq People. We pay respect to the Indigenous knowledges held by the Mi'kmaq People, and to the wisdom of their Elders past and present. The Mi'kmaq People signed Peace and Friendship Treaties with the Crown, and section 35 of the Constitution Act, 1982 recognizes and affirms Aboriginal and Treaty rights. We are all Treaty people.

We at Dalhousie also acknowledge the histories, contributions, and legacies of African Nova Scotians, who have been here for over 400 years.

MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN OF LIBRARIES

It is hard to believe this is my last annual report as Dean of Libraries. As I packed up my office, ready to leave the Libraries in the capable hands of our incoming Dean Michael Vandenburg, I found myself reflecting on the many accomplishments we've had these past 11 years.

Along with the continuation of many library services, we added new services to our offerings, including Copyright, Records Management, Instructional Technologies, Classroom Technologies, 3D printing and scanning, Open Journal Hosting (OJS), a seed library, scholarly communications, Research Data Management, and more. We created virtual services in Collaborate and Microsoft Teams to better support students and faculty and cemented our reputation as a respected partner in teaching, learning, and research, as university-wide policies were developed to support our work. We saw our library spaces expand with the addition of the Wallace McCain Learning Commons, the MacRae Library Student Learning Commons, and the Kellogg Library Learning Commons, while existing spaces became more vibrant and varied with renovations at the Sexton, Killam, Kellogg, and Law Libraries.

Thank you to everyone in the Dalhousie Libraries for your dedication. It is difficult to express how in awe I am of everything that you do, and how grateful I feel to have worked with you. It has been an honour.

Donna Bourne-Tyson
Dean of Libraries (outgoing)

I arrived at Dalhousie in mid-August; and as a twotime graduate of Dal, my first few months have felt both familiar and new at the same time.

As I've had some time to get to know the capable team here at the Dalhousie Libraries, I am eager to see what we will accomplish in the next year. We've had many success stories under Donna's leadership and I am keen to continue that streak.

Before starting in this role, I was the Interim Executive Director of the Ontario Council of University Libraries (OCUL). OCUL is the consortium of Ontario's 21 university libraries, committed to maximizing collective expertise and resources through collaborative efforts.

Before that, I spent twelve years at Queen's University Library, most recently serving in Acting and Interim Vice-Provost & University Librarian roles. During that time, I played a key role in developing and supporting the library's Information Resources Strategy, Digital Asset Management Strategy, and Action Plan to Support Anti-Racism, Diversity, Inclusion and Indigenous Cultures. I look forward to continuing this work at Dalhousie.

Michael Vandenburg
Dean of Libraries (incoming)

ARCHIVES, RECORDS MANAGEMENT & SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

The Archives received a number of new donations this year, including a map from 1684 called The Coast of Acadie by Sieur Lalanne and materials from the Nova Scotia Mass Choir including textual records, photographs, audio and video cassettes, and DVDs.

Materials from the Archives were recently used in the book Saint-Omer 14-18 À l'arrièredes linges britanniques I Behind The British Lines. Archives Assistant Dianne Landry received a special thank-you mention in the book for the assistance she provided the author.

We continue to build on our success with the Nova Scotia LGBT Seniors' Archive by hosting a series of panel discussions inspired by materials in the collection. The first event, Finding Our History: A Conversation About LGBT Collections and Exhibitions was held on October 28 to celebrate LGBT History Month. The second panel discussion, called Visibility Matters: Representation of Lesbian Communities in Archives and Beyond, took place on Lesbian Visibility Day, observed annually in Canada on April 26.

In Records Management, we celebrated Records & Information Management Month in April with a series of videos that we released weekly to the Dalhousie community on topics such as What is records management?, Dalhousie's Records Management Policy, Introducing Dalhousie Libraries' Records Management Office, and The Benefits of Good Records Management.

In Special Collections, we added to our world-class Kipling Collection with the purchase of galley proofs for Kipling's short story Little Foxes. The proofs contain interesting changes made by Kipling himself. That, combined with the rarity of finding proofs on the market in general make this a very exciting acquisition.

Promotional pieces for the October and April NS LGBT Seniors Archive panel discussions. The Coast of Acadie by Sieur Lalanne, a recent Archives acquisition.

ACADEMIC TECHNOLOGY SERVICES

In addition to supporting faculty in the classroom and online through our Classroom Technology and Instructional Technology units, we have spent time this year working towards a significant DalSpace upgrade. Dal Space is Dalhousie's institutional repository that collects, preserves, and distributes digital material produced by the Dalhousie community. We are also working on a new plan for storage solutions to support micro credentialing and the syllabus policy.

With Facilities, we completed a screen replacement project for the Ondaatje and Scotiabank auditoriums. It was a challenging undertaking as a large window in the Ondaatje Auditorium had to be temporarily removed to get the new screen in.

Just a short note to let you know how impressed I was this afternoon after visiting the Help Desk for assistance with a problem I was having with Word (Microsoft Office). The Help Desk Technician named Gino was so very helpful in rectifying the problem and also providing assistance with turning off some of the options in my nine year old Mac Book Pro that were not being used. He did all of this while providing a mini clinic in such a professional fashion and manner that was just extraordinary. All this for a Dalhousie retiree...faculty member and men's volleyball coach for 20 years, then Director of Athletics and Recreational Services for 9 years before retiring. The Help Desk with staff with such special expertise and manners is really great PR for Dal and in my case really appreciated. Sincerely, Al Scott

KO'JUA OKUOM

On National Indigenous People's Day, June 21, we launched an Indigenous community room in the Killam Memorial Library. The room is a space for reflection, celebration, and a place for advancing Indigenization, decolonization, and reconciliation at Dalhousie.

Catherine Martin, Dalhousie's Director of Indigenous Community Engagement, opened the event by singing a traditional Mi'kmaq welcome song. Dalhousie's President Deep Saini spoke about how the strength of relationships with Indigenous communities is fundamental to the university's success. Our Indigenous Services Librarian Samantha Adema was the MC for the event and reflected on her own experiences as a student at Dalhousie seeking a space where her culture was visible on campus.

The room's name, Ko'jua Okuom, refers to an Indigenous dance of friendship and loosely translates to "dancing place." Elder Thomas Christmas named the room and explained, "The Mohawk gave us that dance (Ko'jua) in friendship and peace, dancing together as partners."

Libraries have a history of exploiting Indigenous culture and knowledge while denying Indigenous people access to these spaces. We have an obligation to redress historical and ongoing systemic inequalities and to build integrity in our relationships with Canada's First Nations. The Ko'jua Okuom is one way we are demonstrating this commitment in the Dalhousie Libraries.

The room was designed with Indigenous colleagues to celebrate Indigenous culture in an environment where everyone can learn more about Indigenous customs and traditions through events and collections of Indigenous books, art, and artefacts.

Ron Prosper, son of book donor Jim Prosper, whose extensive book collection is on display in the room. See page 22 for more information.

RECONCILIATION

As part of our ongoing commitment to reconciliation, we began administering 4 Seasons of Reconciliation, a ten-module course available to those employed at Dalhousie. In advance of launching the course, Indigenous Services Librarian Samantha Adema worked with members of Dalhousie's Indigenous Advisory Council to get their feedback on the content. We then worked with the First Nations University of Canada on revisions, including the addition of a video by Elders from the east coast. This past year, the course was funded by the Faculty of Engineering; responsibility for funding the course will be shared across different faculties and units. By mid-May, 821 people at Dalhousie had registered for the course.

Samantha Adema and Associate Dean Library Services & Head of the MacRae Library Elaine MacInnis have been appointed as council members to the National Indigenous Knowledge and Language Alliance (NIKLA), an association with a mission to unify and amplify the voices of Indigenous Peoples and to nurture a community of practice related to cultural memory, language, and Indigenous ways of knowing. Samantha was appointed the Library Community Chair while Elaine is one of the at-large institutional members.

Throughout Mi'kmaq History Month, we hosted several events in the MacRae Library that were planned by Keah Gloade, Manager of Indigenous Students for the Faculty of Agriculture. These events included a Grandmother Moon Ceremony led by Elder Doreen Bernard as well as unveilings of an orange shirt and a red dress.

In honour of the first National Day for Truth & Reconciliation, Dalhousie's Human Rights & Equity Services unit invited Samantha to give opening remarks at a film screening of The Secret Path by Gord Downie.

Red Dress display by Indigenous Services Librarian Samantha Adema in the Ko'jua Okuom for Red Dress Day on May 5, the National Day of Awareness for Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women, Girls and 2 Spirited Peoples. Prior to setting up the display, Dalhousie's Director of Indigenous Community Engagement Catherine Martin performed a smudging ceremony with the team assembling the exhibit.

COLLECTIONS

For the first time this year, we were thrilled to begin offering remote access to some of the Libraries' scholarly electronic publications to alumni. Currently, we are offering access to five scholarly resources and we hope to expand that list over time.

The Killam Reference Collection received a complete overhaul this past year as we shifted the collection from the room that would become the Ko'jua Okuom. This was a large undertaking that involved liaison librarians and many Resources and Access Services staff.

After an extended period of analysis and discussions, the Dal Libraries has transitioned to the ProQuest Central license that combines several types of online content. Through this agreement, Dal users continue to have access to seven databases and 13,000 full-text journals and have gained access to an additional 6,500 full-text journals.

Other new acquisitions include the Canadian Standards Association CSA OnDemand database (which includes more than 1,800 current and historical standards), Pidgeon Digital (200+talks/interviews with architects), and Inspiration from DETAIL (database with photos, drawings, plans, and technical information sourced from DETAIL magazine).

OPEN ACCESS & OPEN EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES

For more than four years, through the Canadian Research Knowledge Network (CRKN), the Dal Libraries have supported the SCOAP3 initiative that has funded the publication of 35,000 open access articles in a number of leading particle physics journals. In a recent extension of this project, SCOAP3 has negotiated the conversion to open access of 102 published books in the same subject area. In July, we committed to a one-time contribution for this initiative.

Through our affiliation with the Canadian Research Knowledge Network (CRKN), Dalhousie researchers can now publish in over 900 SAGE Choice journals without having to pay article processing charges (APCs). Since this agreement started in 2021, Dal authors have saved more than $90,000 (USD) on APCs.

The Libraries have made a three-year commitment to the MIT Press Direct to Open (D2O) eBook initiative. A long-standing academic publisher of note, MIT Press publishes books in the humanities, sciences, and social sciences. For over a decade, they have been increasing the number of monographs they publish as open access. They will publish about 90 titles per year under the D2O model.

In partnership with the Centre for Learning & Teaching, and with thanks to support from Dalhousie's Strategic Initiative Funding, we awarded over $29,000 in the form of five grants to Dalhousie educators who plan to adapt or create an Open Educational Resource (OER). Congratulations to the grant recipients!

- Applied Ethics Primer: Responding to Feedback and Lessons Learned Dr. Letitia Meynell, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
- Leading in Organizational Complexity and Management Skills Development Dr. James R. Barker, Faculty of Management, Rowe School of Business
- Research Data Management in the Canadian Context: A Guide for Practitioners and Learners Dr. Mike Smit, Professor, School of Information Management & Lachlan MacLeod, Copyright and Research Data Management Coordinator, Dal Libraries
- Mapping Learning Trajectories in Online Learning Environments: A Learning by Teaching Approach to Address Common Misconceptions in Introductory Programming Eric Poitras, Assistant Professor, Faculty of Computer Science
- Information in society: an open textbook Dr. Philippe Mongeon, Assistant Professor, School of Information Management, Faculty of Management

EVENTS

In partnership with the Writers' Federation of Nova Scotia, we presented a special version of our annual Raddall reading to celebrate 30 years of the Thomas Raddall Atlantic Fiction Award. The award is credited with growing an entire generation of Atlantic Canadian literature. Past award winners Anne Simpson, Don Hannah, John Steffler, Lisa Moore, Linda Little, and Michael Crummey, along with host Alexander MacLeod, gathered to talk about the impact the award has had on their lives and their writing, with each author also reading a passage from a favourite winning book.

Also with the Writers' Federation of Nova Scotia, we presented The Secret Admirers' Society the day after Valentine's Day with six local authors. One author started things off by reading a passage from a work by a writer they admire, and then that author would read a passage from an author they admire, and so on. We were joined by Donna Morrissey, Nicola Davison, Stephens Gerard Malone, Sherri Fitch, Andre Fenton, and Abela Beloved Green.

We hosted two in-person author readings this year. The first was in the MacRae Library with Charlotte Mendel, a part-time academic with the department of Business and Social Sciences. Charlotte read from her new YA novel, Reversing Time. At the Sexton Library, we hosted retired architect and Dalhousie alum Don Lohnes. Don read from his novel Architect.

This year's Dal Reads book was Butter Honey Pig Bread, the debut novel by Halifax-based author Francesca Ekwuyasi. The book tells the interwoven stories of twin sisters, Kehinde and Taiye. We did three online events with Francesca, including a discussion about beekeeping and writing with beekeeper and fellow author Cooper Lee Bombardier.

Loved Francesca's description of opening a door to invite readers in, but also not making it TOO comfortable. As a white woman, I appreciate the reminder that not everything is FOR me. Such a treat to hear such an amazing author.

COMMUNITY

This year, we were thrilled to support the new BIPOC Graduate Student Mentoring Academy. The Academy supports the professional development of Dalhousie's BIPOC graduate students and addresses barriers due to systemic racism that limit students from reaching their full potential. We look forward to building this relationship in the years to come.

We also supported a number of COVID-related initiatives at Dalhousie this year, with some of our staff volunteering to do COVID test kit assembly. In October, we hosted a twice-weekly COVID-19 vaccination clinic that was open to the community in the MacRae Library. We also worked with the Provost's Office on a vaccine mandate pop-up notice in Brightspace to ensure that students were made aware of the mandate while it was in effect.

This year marked the end of the Agricultural Transformation Through Stronger Vocational Education (ATTSVE) project. The staff at the MacRae Library were very involved in this decade-long project, working to assess and upgrade facilities and resources for libraries at four agricultural colleges in Ethiopia, as well as providing training to staff who work in those college libraries.

DIGITAL STRATEGY

The libraries continue to play a major role in Dalhousie's first digital strategy, which launched in the fall of 2021. A number of people from the Dalhousie Libraries are working on Pillar 2, which is the people-centric pillar and covers information literacy/digital fluency training for all Dalhousie faculty and staff, initiatives related to remote working, platform-agnostic systems, accessibility and digital divide issues, as well as universal design and usability.

SERVICES

Along with our colleagues in Novanet, we spent a significant time this past year on the implementation of a new library system called Alma. Thank you to all the personnel in Resources, Access Services, and beyond who contributed to the success of this project. It was truly a team effort.

Since the onset of COVID-19, the popularity of our laptop loaning service has increased exponentially. We continue to adjust our loan periods and increase the number of laptops we have to meet the demand. We now have close to 200 laptops that we loan to students by the day or month.

The GIS Lunchless Learn series that takes place twice annually continues to be one of our most popular offerings. Thanks to Jen Strang for making these sessions a success. In February for International Love Data Week we offered a series of light-hearted sessions on topics such as geospatial data, data literacy, research data management, and secondary datasets.

Earlier this year, we took part in the Esri Canada Centre of Excellence App Challenge. Two teams from Dalhousie spent a week creating new geospatial apps using open data resources. The theme was support for natural disasters or emergency preparedness. Thanks to James Boxall and Thomas Zuberbuehler for supporting the students involved.

The Copyright Office has had a busy year with reserves requests, streaming video processing, and faculty questions. We had a high volume of requests from student and other on-campus groups looking for advice on film screenings. The streaming video databases we purchased with the onset of COVID continue to be essential for providing resources to classes.

LEARNING & TEACHING

This year, we started working with the Faculty of Open Learning and Continuing Education on DalOpen, a new program where participants can earn a university credit by taking a course on a schedule that fits their life. Indigenous Services Librarian Samantha Adema also started working with the team, developing the curriculum for the Indigenous Studies major.

Throughout the year, many of our librarians are invited to teach. Lindsay McNiff taught a session in the Centre for Learning & Teaching's Scholarship of Teaching and Learning program while Hannah Steeves and Mark Lewis taught a module on legal research for the Indigenous Blacks & Mi'kmaq Initiative. A number of librarians and staff from the Sir James Dunn Law Library also participated in an orientation event with incoming law students where the library was set up as a giant game of Clue and staff played various Clue characters.

We also offer instruction to the wider Dalhousie community. In the fall and the winter, we offer a series of workshops covering topics such as citation management, archival research, and literature reviews. In the summer, we offer Research Summer Camp, a series of pre-recorded modules available through Brightspace primarily for TAs, RAs, and graduate students.

SUPPORTING RESEARCHERS

This fall, we participated in the Council of Atlantic Academic Libraries' webinar series about research data management. Two of our librarians, Louise Gillis and Erin MacPherson, presented and/or moderated a number of the sessions for faculty members, researchers, and graduate students.

The series was developed to teach attendees everything they need to know about the Tri-Agency Research Data Management Policy and how they can be ready to meet the policy requirements. Louise also joined the national NDRIO-Portage's Data Storage and Repository Working Group as well as the regional CAUL-CBUA's Digital Preservation and Stewardship Committee. Later this year, we launched our research commons web pages, a user-focused approach to guiding researchers through the services available through the libraries and beyond that will support them through the research lifecycle.

- Jolene Reid Instructional Support Technician (temporary assignment)
- David Ryan Library Services Supervisor
- Sarah Stevenson Associate Dean.

Archives, Records Management and Special Collections (& Head of Killam Library, continuing)

In Memory Of

With deep sadness, we note the passing of our former colleagues Phil O'Hara and Linda MacLeod.

Phil joined the Dal Libraries' team in 2013 when management of Dalhousie's Learning Management System came to the Dalhousie Libraries from Dalhousie's Integrated Learning Office. Phil brought tremendous experience, visionary leadership, and a passion for providing the best service possible. He retired from Dalhousie in 2014.

Linda was a Dalhousie graduate who worked with the Dal Libraries for over 30 years before her retirement in 2015. She is remembered with admiration and fondness by all who worked with her.

SPECIAL GIFTS

This past year, we celebrated the donation of two very special book collections. In December, we hosted a virtual event to celebrate the donation of hundreds of books and archival materials from the personal collection of Dr. Jock and Janet Murray. The breadth of subject matter covered in the materials that the Murrays donated is emblematic of the extraordinary donors themselves. From the esoteric to the general, there is something for everyone in this collection that can be found in the Kellogg and Killam Libraries.

In June, we celebrated another very special donation from residential school survivor Jim Prosper. While searching for information about his birth parents, Jim became an ardent researcher on the topics colonialism, aboriginal treaties, rights, and sovereignty. Jim amassed his extraordinary book collection over twenty years, dealing with some of the most well-known antiquarian book sellers in Canada. The exceedingly rare and old books, including bibles, hymnbooks, and catechisms in Mi'kmaq, some dating to the late 1800s, are securely housed in our Special Collections, while the more contemporary books can be found on the shelves in the Ko'jua Okuom in the Killam Memorial Library.
