APA Style (6th) Quick Guide

This guide provides examples for selected research sources based on the style recommended in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA) (6th ed., 2010). In-text citations indicate the exact location for sources of information used in the text of the paper; the reference list describes the works from which the citations are taken.

NOTE: APA requires double-spacing between ALL text lines, including references. In an attempt to save space, this document has been formatted in single spacing.

Formatting your paper

APA style requires that you use parenthetical citations to document quotations, paraphrases, summaries, and other material from a source used in your paper corresponding to the full bibliographic entries found in a list of references included at the end of your paper. To cite a source in the text of your assignment, indicate in parentheses the last name of the author(s), or if there is no author, the first few words of the document title (in quotation marks), followed by the year of publication, and the page number. The following paragraphs show sample in-text citations:

In his classic study, Gardner (2004) summarizes the scepticism of current researchers and observers about whether the messages presented in the Fourth Assessment Report were really about the end of the World as we know it. His conclusion is that “anthropogenic global warming is occurring” (p. 22)<sup>1</sup> and human activities are to blame. But four renowned researchers (Tannenbaum, Leung, Sudha, & White, 2005)<sup>2</sup> who re-analysed published data have rejected the likelihood of human influence on recent climate and concluded that:

The current climate change is natural. The close of the millennium was marked by a deep suspicion of the natural world and an increasing reliance upon the pronouncements of soothsayers and visionaries, who caused hysteria with their doom-laden forecasts of the end of humanity. (p. 184)<sup>3</sup>

This has prompted some key influential organisations to hold non-committal positions on this issue. But in a recent publication Cooper et al. (2009) positively identified the "human fingerprints" associated with climate changes stating that “temperatures have risen compared to pre-1800 levels, and humans significantly influence the global temperature” (p. 19). This is echoed by Al Gore in his recent presentation at Dalhousie University when he concluded that “we're in for a planetary emergency unless we change the way we live now” (personal communication, May 3, 2010).<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> APA recommends including page numbers for quotations, not necessarily for paraphrases or summaries (N.B. ask your instructor when to include page numbers). If there are no page numbers, then include paragraph numbers, e.g., (Jones, 2007, para. 4).

<sup>2</sup> When a source that has 3 to 5 authors is cited, all authors are included the first time the source is cited. If that source is cited again, the first author's surname and "et al.", e.g., (Tannenbaum et al., 2005). When a source that has six or more authors is cited, the first author's surname and "et al." are used every time the source is cited (including the first time), e.g., (Cooper et al., 2009).

<sup>3</sup> Place direct quotations longer than 40 words in a free-standing block and omit quotation marks.

<sup>4</sup> Personal communications, including an interview, email, or lecture is not included in the list of references.

In-text citations and references

NOTE: See page 6 for author variations, e.g., how to cite a reference by more than one author, by a corporate author, or when no author is listed.

NOTE: Page numbers are only required for in-text citations when a direct quote is used.
