The Primary and Integrated Health Care Innovations Network (PIHCIN) and the Saskatchewan SPOR PIHCIN are pleased to host the first session in a series of summer learning seminars on primary care. This session will start with a presentation exploring primary care research, the role PIHCIN plays in promoting primary care and how this might evolve within the context of the COVID-19 pandemic. The presentation will be followed by an interactive Q & A session with our invited panel members moderated by the Saskatchewan network manager, Janice Braden. This interactive seminar is an excellent opportunity for anyone interested in primary care to gain a greater understanding of the current Canadian primary care research environment with a glimpse into what the future might look like. Everyone is welcome but registration is mandatory.
