

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface

Ann L. Griffiths vii

Part One: The Issues

The Canadian Forces and the Doctrine of Interoperability: The Issues

Danford W. Middlemiss and Denis Stairs 1

Part Two: The Debate

Military Interoperability: As Canadian as a Beaver

Douglas L. Bland 49

The Military Politics of Interoperability

Stephen J. Cimbala 64

Uncle Sam and Canada after September 11th

Stephen Clarkson 77

Canada-US Interoperability

Daniel Y. Coulter 89

Defining The Debate: A Response to Danford Middlemiss and Denis Stairs

Ann Denholm Crosby 95

CANUS Interoperability: Towards a Home Port Division of the United States Navy?

Richard H. Gimblett 101

From Empire to Umpire to Empire: Canada and the Dilemmas of Military Interoperability

David G. Haglund 109

Interoperability and the Canadian Navy: A Classic Example of “Hobson’s Choice”
Lieutenant-Commander Brent Hobson 118

NORAD: Interoperability at “The Zenith”
Joseph Jockel 126

Interoperability: The Next Stage in Canada-US Integration?
W. Andy Knight 135

Interoperability at Work
LGen George Macdonald 150

Interoperability and Its Consequences
Desmond Morton 159

(Inter)Operating within Niches of Security: A Response to Middlemiss And Stairs
David Mutimer 166

Canada and the United States in a Hyperpower Era
Kim Richard Nossal 172

“The Canadian Forces and the Doctrine of Interoperability”: A Response
John L. Orr 182

Interoperability, Policy and Sovereignty: A Reaction to “The Canadian Forces and the Doctrine of Interoperability”
Major-General H. Cameron Ross and Nigel R. Thalakada 195

The Canadian Military Relationship with the United States: An Overseas Commentary
Jeremy Stocker 201

If You Can’t Work With Your Allies, Who Do You Want to Work With?
Robert H. Thomas 208

THE CANADIAN FORCES & INTEROPERABILITY: PANACEA OR PERDITION

There Is No Alternative: Reflections on “The Canadian Forces and the Doctrine of Interoperability”
Stanley B. Weeks 214

About The Contributors 221

