Chris Kaposy

Drawing on his forthcoming book, Choosing Down Syndrome: Ethics and New Prenatal Testing Technologies, bioethicist Chris Kaposy will discuss the benefits that families enjoy when they bring children with Down syndrome into the world. Parents of children with Down syndrome have written extensively about their experiences, and social science research shows that people with Down syndrome typically have high levels of well-being, and that their families function well. These sources show that bringing a child with Down syndrome into the world can be positively transformative.
